

Optimal Number of Clusters Determination

The elbow method was used to determine the optimal number of clusters for this dataset. Inertia values (sum of squared distances between data points and their corresponding cluster centers) were calculated for cluster numbers ranging from 1 to 10. The elbow point, where the rate of inertia reduction slows significantly, indicates the optimal number of clusters.

